The World Trade Center and Pentagon tragedies happened as we were going to press with this issue.

At press time, we had learned that Angela Vaira Kyte '73 and Jon Vandevander '79 were among those missing from the World Trade Center.

We will not know the full impact of this tragedy for some time to come. We would like to do a full report on how these events affected the Lycoming community in the winter issue of the magazine. Therefore, if you know of any losses or particularly compelling stories that came out of the events of September 11, 2001, we invite you to share them with the alumni office.

Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends:

Sometimes evidence of an institution's growth can be found in new facilities. The Robert L. Shangraw Athletic Complex and the southward expansion of the Lycoming campus are testaments to that fact. Lycoming College's growth this past year, however, has not been the kind you can see from the street. Upon a foundation set long ago, the College's growth in academic stature and reputation was recognized in several quarters during the 2000-2001 academic year.

This past June, the Middle States Commission on Higher Education reaffirmed the accreditation of Lycoming College, as it must do every ten years. Responding to our own internal self-study, the Commission acted on the recommendation of its visiting team from several colleges. The goals and objectives set by the College were accepted, and the Commission found no deficiencies worthy of additional comment. In other words, Lycoming received an A+.

The quality of the College was recognized in other quarters as well. As you may know, the Carnegie Foundation has the responsibility of assigning all colleges and universities to specific institutional categories based on nationally established criteria. Earlier this year, the Foundation re-classified Lycoming College, recognizing our strength as a liberal arts college. The College was moved from the larger category of Liberal Arts II colleges to the more prestigious Liberal Arts I group. U.S. News and World Report, which takes many cues from Carnegie in setting its own categories, immediately reclassified the College from its "regional liberal arts" group to the National Liberal Arts category. Lycoming is now listed among the major liberal arts colleges in the United States.

When we opened the College in late August, our Convocation speaker, Dr. Brenda Alston-Mills, Class of 1966 and a professor of Animal Science at North Carolina State University, joined us in greeting both the 410 members of the Class of 2005 and our new transfer students. As in the past, this year we will celebrate athletic contests, choral and theatrical events, visiting lecturers, artistic displays and the activities of numerous clubs and organizations. The College's hallmark—its small classes taught by highly credentialed faculty—will continue to prepare all our students extremely well for their lives and careers.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

While the College's reputation continues to grow and more students want to attend, we are faced with the awesome task of balancing costs while retaining the quality of the instruction and programs that have propelled Lycoming thus far. Keeping Lycoming's doors open to all qualified students is perhaps our most difficult challenge. Barron's assessment of our quality and costs affirmed Lycoming as a "Best Buy in Higher Education." Even so, the fact remains that only 3% of all families of high school seniors can afford Lycoming's tuition and fees. To give our current and future students the opportunities to succeed, Lycoming College must increase both its Annual Fund and its Endowment. The College has now attained the status of a National Liberal Arts College, but we lag behind the vast majority of our new contemporaries in such resources.

I know you share with our trustees, staff and faculty the goal of providing an excellent education for our students. Thank you for your generosity this year. We can continue to create these wonderful educational opportunities only through your support.

Sincerely,

James E. Douthat

YEAR IN REVIEW

August 2000

Lycoming College "moves up" when the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching reclassifies Lycoming College from a Baccalaureate-II College to a Baccalaureate-Liberal Arts college. With this re-classification, Lycoming College shares company with 218 other nationally recognized colleges in the United States, including Williams, Lafayette and Swarthmore.

"This is great news," is the comment of James D. Spencer, dean of admissions and financial aid. "If this were sports, it would be like going "Division I," he adds.

September

Works by internationally known artist Fritz Hirschberger are displayed in the Art Gallery from September 21 through Monday, October 23. Hirschberger is a Holocaust survivor and, through his art, depicted the struggles of his family and friends during World War II.

Hirschberger work on display.

October

Homecoming 2000 brings back hundreds of alumni, including a special group of Theta Chi brothers. Jim Hebe '71, Bill Sherwood '58, and Tom Vanaskie '75 receive awards.

November

International students serve dinner to faculty, staff and invited guests.

December

Lycoming's candlelight service becomes a wonderful Lycoming memory for many students.

January

Lycoming College Art Faculty exhibit their own work in the Gallery. The mixed media exhibition included drawings and sculpture by Roger Shipley; sculpture by Jon Bogle; photography, installations and computer graphics by Lynn Estomin, and photography by Danielle Goodyear.

February

Dr. Michael Musheno '69 speaks as part of the Larry Strauser Lectureship in Criminal Justice. Musheno is a professor in the School of Justice Studies at Arizona State University. The late Larry Strauser served as director of the Lycoming College Criminal Justice Program from 1973 to 1999.

March

A month long symposium called "East/West: Points of Contact" addresses intercultural tural communication between eastern and western societies.

The symposium includes a gallery exhibition by Patrick Nagatani, the children's theatre production of 1000 Cranes, a Kabuki performance and an international film festival, culminating in a two-day conference, March 16-17, that includes 15 different sessions on a wide range of topics.

April

Lycoming dedicates the site for its own Habitat for Humanity House.

Lycoming College presents an evening of JAZZ AND POETRY on April 10 in the Mary L. Welch Theatre. The evening celebrates both jazz and jazz poetry. The poets include Rick Madigan and Jan Selving from East Stroudsburg as well as Steve Cramer '95, Peggy Cronin '84, and Vanessa Stauffer '01. The poetry is interspersed with music by a jazz trio and sax solos by Prof. Sascha Feinstein.

May

A Conference on Teaching Excellence on May 3-4 brings Peter Seldin, distinguished professor of management at Pace University to campus as well as faculty from all over the Northeast. The two-day event offers 21 different workshops and presentations.

Dr. John Piper (left) and Peter Seldin

The Mary L. Welch Theatre hosts "June in Bloom": a series of two plays and a musical revue during the month of June.

July

Pennsylvania Free Enterprise Week brings nearly 1400 high school students to the Lycoming College campus over a four-week period.

The program, which draws students from 58 different counties, introduces students to the American free enterprise system through an intensive one-week education that has students running their own "companies" while living in Lycoming College residence halls. The program is good for the College with many of these PFEW students later applying to Lycoming.

August

The Class of 2005 enters Lycoming through the David B Sykes. This is the largest freshman class in recent history. Brenda Alston-Mills '66 is the Convocation speaker.

Frank Girardi enters his 30th year at the helm of the Lycoming College football program. He has become a legend in his field by building one of the most respected and consistently successful NCAA Division III football programs in the nation.

In his 29 seasons at Lycoming, Girardi has built a career record of 218-68-5 - a winning percentage of .758. He is one of only three active coaches at the NCAA Division III level to record 200 victories and one of only 11 active coaches at all levels of the NCAA to reach the milestone. His .758 winning percentage is seventh among active Division III coaches.

Warrior teams coached by Girardi have won 12 Middle Atlantic Conference championships and made 10 appearances in the NCAA playoffs, including trips to the Stagg Bowl, the Division III national championship game, in 1990 and 1997. Lycoming is currently riding a streak of 26 consecutive winning seasons under the direction of Girardi—the sixth longest current streak in Division III and the eighth longest active streak among all colleges.

His accomplishments and consistency have not gone unnoticed by others. The Middle Atlantic Conference has honored Girardi as their Coach of the Year on 12 occasions, and in 1999 he became the Robert W. Maxwell Football Club's first recipient of their Tri-State Coach of the Year Award. The award is presented to an outstanding college or high school coach from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, or Delaware.

Girardi began his love affair with football in high school when he carried the ball as a running back for the Williamsport Millionaires. He continued to play at the collegiate level at West Chester University. Girardi entered the coaching ranks in 1961 when he became an assistant at Jersey Shore High School. He became head coach of the team in 1963 and remained in that position for six years. In 1969, Girardi became an assistant at Lycoming under Budd Whitehill. Three years later, he took the reins as head coach of a Warrior program that had gone 14-34 since their last winning season in 1965. Lycoming's woes continued during Girardi's first three seasons with marks of 2-6, 2-6 and 3-6. But in his fourth season, the Warriors went 6-2 and have not recorded a losing campaign since.

In 1984, Girardi accepted an expanded role in the College's athletic department as the Director of Athletics. He continues to serve in that capacity today, overseeing Lycoming's 19 intercollegiate athletic programs that compete in the MAC.

Girardi's wife, Lynne, teaches in the Williamsport Area school system. Their daughter, Justine, graduated from Lycoming in 1996. Three other Girardi children - Cathy, Jerry and Frank, Jr. - have also graduated from the College.

Convocation, August 2001

Dr. Brenda Alston-Mills

Excerpts from Convocation Address:

When I was first asked to speak with you on this occasion of the opening Convocation, of course my response was "Oh wow, absolutely". As I thought about it, I was reminded of my first job interview after the Ph.D. in an Animal Science department. Animal Science deals with large animals such as horses, cows, sheep, goats, and pigs.

My degree was in Zoology/Physiology with a concentration in hormonal regulation of mammary gland cancers. The largest animal that I worked with was a rabbit. During that interview I was asked, "Well Brenda, cows don't get breast cancer so what are you going to do here if you get the position?" My reply was "A Ph.D. provides the tools to do scholarly research, it's a means to an end etc." and I went on and on.

After I accepted the position I said, "Oh my goodness, cows don't get breast cancer, what am I going to do?"

So, after I accepted this responsibility, I thought the same, "Oh my goodness, I am presenting the Convocation address. What am I going to talk about?"

Last month, the text dropped out of the sky. I was in an airplane, on my way home from attending the 14th International Conference on the First Year Experience. I had served as a facilitator in a Philosophy course entitled The Moral Community. The rationale of the course was conceived to introduce students to diversity during their first year in college.

After listening to many speakers, I had to ask myself the question: What did Lycoming College do for me? My conclusion was that even during the tumultuous and turbulent 60s, which was my time here, Lycoming College did it correctly.

This college provided a positive atmosphere and a progressive learning environment for everyone. In addition to the basic information on study tips and time management in our orientation course, I was introduced to the concept of true education. Education is not just the classroom lectures, the textbooks and being able to pass exams, although I am certainly not underestimating the importance of those very necessary aspects of the college experience. More importantly, I learned how to receive and to process information and how to formulate ideas.

In addition to the classroom, which included time for study in France, input came from observations and experiences in campus clubs such as the Biology Club and the French Club, interactions with faculty outside the classroom, and the individual attention given to each student by everyone from the administration to the staff. Further, there were positive interactions with my peers as well as with the Williamsport community.

Upon further reflection, inputs of a lot of different kinds of information gave rise and continue to give rise to new ideas. I then determined and continue to believe that new ideas often take us outside of our comfort zone or outside of those things that we know and that make us feel at ease.

When entering into a new situation, all of us come in from different backgrounds and very often with a pre-set plan of action. New ideas challenge our values and challenge our paradigms of how we think that the world should be and how those in it should behave.

It's scary and sometimes, as new college students, you will feel as I felt: I wondered if I was the only person on the planet experiencing these new thoughts. But the wonderful thing is, as I discovered, outside of that zone, there are marvelous opportunities and experiences.

If all of us, as participants involved in higher education and as citizens of the world, can avail ourselves of these opportunities, there is a phenomenal result that occurs called self-actualization.

The more we know about the world around us and the many different groups of people that are in it, the better we know ourselves. Self-actualization allows for critical analyses and the ability to make informed decisions.

Even with the best of reasoning and rationale, there are outside influences that are beyond our control.

Dr. Alston-Mills with Prof. Owen Herring.

College's largest freshman class in a generation.

However, we must take responsibility for each decision that we make, and continue to re-evaluate and assess along the way. There are times when help is needed. It is important to ask for it from whatever are your sources of comfort and support. More importantly, we must learn from each decision, the good ones and the bad ones (both of which are relative terms). To continue forward is the operative.

My message to you is simple and maybe a bit trite. Live and learn. Embrace the old and welcome the new. Education is a journey and not a destination. Above all, never take yourself too seriously and when all else fails, a hearty laugh is good for the psyche and for those around you.

Thank you, good luck and God speed.

Lycoming Annual Fund

Once again we had success

*F*or a second consecutive year, the Lycoming Annual Fund surpassed its goal! Fiscal year 2000-2001 brought $678,669 into the Lycoming Annual Fund. Many donors helped to exceed this year's goal and show an increase over last year's total of $647,580. With over 90% of the students at Lycoming receiving some form of financial aid, gifts to the Lycoming Annual Fund are a necessity to ensure the continued success of Lycoming College and its students. It is the continued generosity of the alumni, parents, and friends of the College that continue to make the Lycoming experience possible for many students.

Alumni participation in the Lycoming Annual Fund remained the same as last year at 23%. It is important to note that the number of alumni who made a gift increased by 138 alumni. The size of our database increases every year due to the recently graduated class. We will continue to strive toward raising the alumni participation rate. Every gift makes a difference...no matter the size. Our success is your success.

John Greenfield '53
The Karafin School for special people

When John Greenfield came to Lycoming College, he had career aspirations to be in the diplomatic corps. Today, several careers away from that initial plan, John works with young people from all over the world as the owner and director of a unique school for students with special learning and emotional needs.

The Karafin School in Mt. Kisco, New York, is not quite like any other private secondary school. The classes are small: six students to a class taught by one teacher and one teacher's assistant. All teachers are dual certified in a subject and in special needs. The students are typically underachievers. Greenfield explains, very good to superior in intelligence, but with problems ranging from dyslexia to emotional overlay, many due to frequent moving.

This kind of specialized attention pays off in 100% placement of Karafin's graduates in either two or four-year colleges. Plus the school meets all the requirements of the New York State Board of Regents

After being graduated from Lycoming College at the height of the Korean Conflict, Greenfield joined the service. While he never saw combat duty, he became secretary to the commanding general at Fort Benning, Georgia. After the service, he married the sister of classmate Carl Buterbaugh and embarked on a teaching career in Waynesboro, Pa., at Western Maryland College, and the Fox Lane School in Bedford, N.Y.

Thirty-five years ago, upon earning his doctorate, he was contacted by Mrs. Karafin to become part of a very special school she had started in Mt. Kisco, New York. Greenfield joined Mrs. Karafin and he and his wife eventually bought the school.

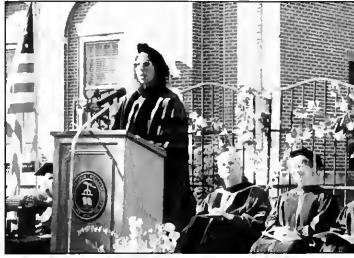

The Greenfieldts are gradually turning the daily operation of the school over to their daughter, Renee, and son-in-law, Dr. Bart Donow. They also have a son, John, who is an essay and short story editor at Wilson Publishing Company in New York City.

The school roster has resounded with names of newsworthy families from around the world. Greenfield releases no names. The school's reputation is quietly circulated among school counselors.

"Oh, no, we never advertise," says Greenfield. "Our work advertises itself."

The Psychology of Change

Most of us change gradually, in small steps over time. We lose or gain a pound at a time, become a little more or less outgoing.

Yet sometimes people are changed dramatically and permanently, in a matter of hours or days. Such transformation is captured in the character of Ebenezer Scrooge in the Dickens classic, A Christmas Carol, but it also happens in real life. It may, in fact, be much more common than most of us realize.

Dr. William R. Miller ('69) became fascinated with such sudden and dramatic Change during a 1990 sabbatical leave in Australia. When returning to the University of New Mexico, where he is Distinguished Professor of Psychology and Psychiatry, he began a ten-year program of research to understand just how such change happens. "There is not even a name for it in my own discipline of psychology," he said. Although epiphanies are familiar in religion and have been written about by theologians, psychologists have focused mainly on step-by-step change.

One of the only psychologists to study such changes, in fact, was William James, sometimes called the father of American psychology. In his 1902 Varieties of Religious Experience, James described such rapid transformations, distinguishing them from what he called the "educational variety" of inch-by-inch change. Such sudden and sweeping changes are also familiar in the writings and stories of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Yet modern psychology has remained silent on the subject. "I became curious about this omission, and set out to see if we could at least describe the phenomenon." Miller and his student, Dr. Janet C' de Baca, were interviewed for a feature story in a local Albuquerque newspaper, and asked for people to call who may have had such an experience. To their surprise, the phone rang for weeks, with dozens of people coming forward. Volunteers were required to spend three hours with Miller's team, telling their stories and completing questionnaires. In the end, the research team documented fifty-five narratives.

The result is Quantum Change: When Sudden Insights and Epiphanies Transform Ordinary Lives, recently published by Guilford Press. It describes commonalities in quantum changes across people who were in all other respects quite diverse. Often, as with Scrooge, the experience was a surprise: unexpected and uninvited. About half were of the "insight type" in which a profound truth or realization suddenly burst upon the person's awareness. "It's not like coming to a conclusion," Miller said. "These people have the sense of knowledge being given to them, and they recognize it for truth the moment they see it."

The other half were of the epiphany variety, and included many of the classic elements of mystical experience. "These people usually felt themselves in the presence of something much greater than themselves." The language they used to describe their experience varied greatly, but the stories have many common features, and nature of the Other was always the same: unspeakably loving and accepting.

Miller and C'de Baca thought that the final chapter of their book would be a psychological discussion of the nature of quantum change, but another surprise lay in store for them. The experiences of these widely diverse people were not only similar in form, but also contained common themes and content. Many, for example, suddenly experienced a profound interconnectedness with all other people, or with all of the universe. There was also a deep sense of peace and trust that endured over time. On average, it had been eleven years since the quantum change occurred, and the storytellers were uniformly confident that they had passed through a one-way door. "It's like having a ten-year follow-up interview with Ebenezer Scrooge," Miller said. The final chapter of their book describes these common "messages for humankind."

The education that Miller received at Lycoming prepared him well for this work. "I had extraordinary professors in psychology, writing, and religion, and my years at Lycoming gave me a lifelong curiosity about human nature." Currently he is chairing a panel of senior psychologists to explore "The Nature of the Human Person" from a Judeo-Christian perspective, with funding from the Pew Charitable Trusts and the University of Notre Dame. He received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from the University of Oregon in 1976, and has authored 26 books and hundreds of scientific articles and chapters. For fifteen years he has been supported by a senior career Research Scientist Award from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, to focus full-time effort on psychological research and the mentoring of new scientists.

One of the questions Jessica posed to Brenda was, "If Timothy McVeigh's execution is broadcast to survivors, will it establish a dangerous precedent?" Brenda feels no precedent would be set "simply because McVeigh's case is so unique. 'There have been very few, if any, death penalty cases in U.S. history with so many victims. Thousands of people were directly affected by the Oklahoma bombing.... The sheer breadth of McVeigh's terrorism makes this crime and its punishment different from anything else we've ever seen.' A Tale of Two Ministers

On May 20, 2001, Daven Oskvig '99 was introduced to the congregation of the First United Methodist Church of Westborough, Massachusetts, as the student pastor for the summer, part of the field experience in which Oskvig must participate as a seminary student at Boston University. Daven was introduced by Rev. George Bieber '41 who told the congregation something that neither Daven nor they yet knew: Bieber and Oskvig were alumni of the same institution in Pennsylvania.

Rev. Bieber and Daven Oskvig

Bieber and Oskvig share an appreciation for the excellent preparation in the study of the Bible that both Dickinson Junior College and Lycoming provided them. Both also found themselves in the ministry because they were called.

Rev. Bieber was called at the age of 12 and with a local preacher's license found himself as pastor of a church in Trout Run at the age of 16. By the time he had started at Dickinson Junior College, he also had a small church in Nisbet. Bieber finished his bachelor's degree at Juniata and went on to the Boston University School of Theology where Daven is studying. He also received a doctorate in clinical psychology in 1952. Bieber's career has been a series of small churches and his business card reads "spiritual healer." He has a book coming out this fall on spiritual healing Miracles in the Making, published by Sealoss Valley Books.

Since retiring in 1988, Bieber has had three more churches and now preaches at special services of the Westborough church. Bieber calls himself a Methodist maverick given to sermons with such titles as "For God's Sake, Shut Up," "Christians Must be Selfish," and "Hurrah for Sin."

Like Bieber, Oskvig received a call to the ministry at the age of 17. His brother is a minister as well. While studying at Lycoming, he spent his summers in park ministry as student pastor in Pennsylvania state parks, a program run by the Pennsylvania Council of Churches. While he is reeling with considerable student debt, Oskvig is also thinking about continuing on in graduate school and completing his doctorate.

Ostvig feels that he is getting "the wisdom of a lifetime in the ministry" from Dr. Bieber. "It is probably his sense of humor that I also cherish and hope to emulate in my own life. However, I also take the seriousness that he approaches doing the work of ministry and preaching the Gospel."

Bieber's advice to Daven is to "find a way to make the necessary themes [of Christianity] understandable to the modern generation."

Save Income Tax

As the holiday season approaches, the spirit of giving becomes more meaningful to everyone, and we show esteem for friends and family with thoughtful gifts. In the same spirit, you can choose from a variety of gifts that will sustain Lycoming College while allowing you great tax benefits in the coming year.

Cash Gifts

Simply write a check to Lycoming College, and you may be able to deduct all or part of your gift, depending on your adjusted gross income.

Appreciated Securities

Avoid the capital gains tax, and take advantage of a charitable income tax deduction.

Life Income Gifts

Place assets in a charitable remainder trust to:

- ▶ eliminate capital gains taxes on appreciated assets
- ▶ receive income for life
- ▶ save current income taxes

One Last Reminder

Any gift to Lycoming College by December 31st supports our commitment to excellence in community service and helps you maximize your tax deductions.

Tired of 4% (or less) returns? Does 7% or 8% strike your fancy?

It's not too good to be true!

Charitable Gift Annuity Rates

AGES	RATE	AGE	RATE
60/55	5.8%	60	6.4%
65/60	6.2%	65	6.7%
70/65	6.4%	70	7.2%
72/67	6.5%	72	7.4%
76/71	6.8%	76	8.0%
80/75	7.3%	80	8.9%
90/85	9.2%	90	12.0%

Today, a gift annuity might pay you eight percent (8%) or more, depending upon your age. Here's even better news—it's guaranteed—and the payments to you are partially tax free.

Q: How does it work?

A: A gift annuity is a contract between a donor and a charity, backed by all of the assets of the charity. It provides a fixed monthly payment for life for one or more donors.

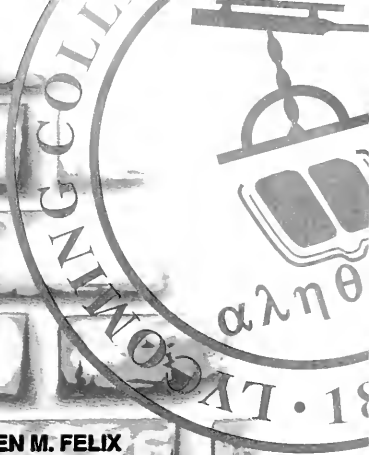

Q: How much can I earn?

A: If you are 65, you will receive 6.7%; if you are 72, the payment will be 7.4%. Please see the table to find the payments for your age. There is a "two-life table" for couples.

Best of all: your gift will help Lycoming College continue to offer the very finest education available to the residents of our community.

YES, I want to Pave the Way with a brick on Commencement Steps. As an alumnus or a special friend of Lycoming College, you now have an opportunity to buy an imprinted brick on the Commencement Steps. Proceeds from the bricks will fund a special endowed scholarship for a future Lycoming student. In a very real sense, you will be paving the way for future generations of Lycoming graduates.

Be among the first to buy an individual imprinted brick at $225 each. All you need to do is send your check with the order blank provided on this page. If you would like more information on this brick project, please call Sue McCormick, Director of Alumni and Parent Programs, at 570-321-4134.

Message selected:

The brick can be imprinted with three lines of up to 15 characters each (including spaces and punctuation). Please print (with capital letters) the name or message you would like on your special brick in the boxes to the right. The manufacturer reserves the right to choose type size and arrange words to maintain balance and improve legibility.
